

BUILDING FUTURES AND PROTECTING WHAT MATTERS

Statement from Steve Johnston, Suncorp Group CEO and MD

This is our second statement under the Australian Modern Slavery Act. It revisits our approach to identify and address the risks of modern slavery in our operations and supply chain, and outlines the progress we made in the year to 30 June 2021.

As a large financial services provider, employer, investor, purchaser and community member, Suncorp recognises that we have an important role to play in respecting and advancing human rights and protecting against modern slavery in Australia and globally.

Suncorp's purpose is building futures and protecting what matters. The work we do to manage modern slavery risk in a constructive and sustainable way is a key part of living this purpose.

Respecting human rights and protecting against modern slavery is core to our approach to sustainability, which is informed through meaningful engagement with our stakeholders to understand the environmental, social and governance risks and opportunities that are material for them and Suncorp.

We believe increased focus and greater transparency will drive meaningful action in managing modern slavery risk, and ensure organisations mature and continuously improve their approach in their operations and supply chains.

In the past year, we assessed the risk of potential modern slavery in key product portfolios, enhanced bank transaction monitoring and deepened visibility of our supply chain. Next financial year, we will continue to collaborate with the financial services industry, and progress our assessment of modern slavery risk across Suncorp.

I'd like to thank the individuals and organisations who have worked with Suncorp to manage modern slavery risks in our operations and supply chain and identify opportunities for industry and cross-industry collaboration. Together with our Board and senior leadership team, I look forward to driving meaningful outcomes and delivering on our commitments.

Steve Johnston,
SUNCORP CEO & MANAGING DIRECTOR

Modern slavery risks

Suncorp uses the 2018 Global Slavery Index (GSI) to help identify the countries, sectors and commodities with the highest risks of modern slavery.

Banking and Insurance, Australia and New Zealand

Suncorp's banking and insurance services are predominantly provided to individual and business customers in Australia and New Zealand.

Suncorp utilises a transaction monitoring system to identify potential cases of modern slavery or labour exploitation, including screening international bank transfers that occur to or from our customers in a number of high risk countries identified in the GSI. Suspicious matters are reported to AUSTRAC.

Low levels of exposure to segments of the agriculture and construction sectors with higher potential modern slavery risk have been identified in our business lending portfolio. Low levels of exposure to modern slavery risk was also identified in the commercial insurance portfolio, including in the agriculture, construction, cleaning, automotive repair, meat/seafood/poultry processing, fishing, shipping, labour hire and sex industries.

Wealth

Suncorp Portfolio Services Limited (SPSL), a wholly owned subsidiary of Suncorp Life Holdings Limited, has an investment management agreement with Morningstar, an external investment manager. This agreement requires Morningstar to ensure there is no modern slavery in its or its subcontractors' operations or supply chains and provide an annual attestation. SPSL's Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) Risk Management Policy has ESG considerations integrated in our Investment Manager due diligence, selection and monitoring processes. The risk of modern slavery in the operations and supply chain of Morningstar has been assessed by Suncorp as low.

Investments

Through its investment portfolios, Suncorp has exposure to approximately 1,000 corporate issuers of debt or equity securities. Some of these issuers operate in higher risk sectors according to the GSI, including mining, garment manufacture, agriculture and construction and geographies including South Africa, Asia and South America. The risk of modern slavery within our aggregate investment portfolios has been assessed by Suncorp as medium.

Suncorp employs 17 external investment managers, three transition managers, one overlay manager and a master custodian. The risk of modern slavery in the operations and supply chains of these service providers has been assessed by Suncorp as low because of their jurisdiction of operations, regulatory oversight, policy frameworks, and business practices.

Our workforce

Direct employment

All of Suncorp's team members are employed directly by a Suncorp Group employing entity.¹ The majority of Suncorp's team members are employed:

- in Australia under permanent employment contracts which meet the requirements of the Suncorp Enterprise Agreement and the Fair Work Act 2009 (Commonwealth); and
- in New Zealand, under either an Individual Employment Agreement or Collective Employment Agreement that meet the requirements of the Employment Relations Act 2000.

All team members in Australia and New Zealand are subject to eligibility to work and age checking mechanisms during recruitment. Due to due diligence in place, and the countries in which our team members work, Suncorp considers there to be a low risk of modern slavery in our direct workforce.

Labour hire and professional services

Our labour hire and professional service supplier groups have agreements in place which contain provisions intended to mitigate against the risk of modern slavery occurring in their operations and supply chains. These services are managed through commercial contracts that include clauses that require the supplier to comply with the Suncorp Supplier Code of Practice. These suppliers are also required to hold a valid labour hire licence for the relevant states. Suncorp has assessed the risk of modern slavery in our labour hire and professional services as low given the due diligence in place, and the countries in which our contractors work.

Offshore business partners

All business partners must adhere to Suncorp's policies and frameworks, including the Suncorp Code of Practice which requires our partners to ensure that no forced labour or child labour is used. The Philippines and India, where our business partners are located, are rated 30 and 67 out of 173 according to the GSI.²

Supply chain

Potential modern slavery risks in our supply chain are assessed and monitored by examining country, sector, product and service categories, and maturity of our suppliers' response to risk. We monitor 500 suppliers who make up the majority of Suncorp's procurement spend.

Categories of products and services at higher risk for Suncorp include:

- Technology and electronics: technology provision including electronics, laptops, computers and mobile phones
- Facilities management: outsourced real estate requirements, including cleaning and security services
- Property, motor and construction: building and repair materials and labour used in property and motor claims businesses
- Promotional goods: this includes items for our brands and purchase of uniforms
- Office consumables: such as tea, coffee, sugar and cocoa for our kitchens, office furniture and paper
- Professional services: offshore business processing

The priority areas for Suncorp in 2020-21 have been our banking and insurance operations in Australia and supply chain. Actions in these areas are detailed in the following pages.

Taking action to address the risks – our banking operations

Business lending portfolio review

In collaboration with the ABA Modern Slavery Working Group, Suncorp developed an approach to assessing potential modern slavery risk in our business lending portfolio. This focused on sectors exposed to potential labour exploitation including agriculture – in particular, sub-sectors within agriculture reliant on manual harvesting – and construction.

In 2020-21, Suncorp undertook the assessment which identified our exposure to the higher potential risk segments of the agriculture and construction sectors, was less than 5% of our business lending portfolio. Next financial year, we will engage our business customers who operate in the agriculture and construction sectors in discussions about modern slavery risks. We will also continue to collaborate with the ABA Modern Slavery Working Group to develop an industry position on a practical response to modern slavery.

Enhanced transaction monitoring

This year Suncorp enhanced its transaction monitoring by including more countries and improving the capability of our people. We expanded the countries we monitor to include additional high risk countries outlined in the GSI. We also began screening customers for media articles related to human rights violations and/or modern slavery.

The Bank AML Investigations Team completed Suncorp's modern slavery CBT module, now an annual requirement for the team. They also participated in a session to increase their awareness of modern slavery and labour exploitation in the agriculture and construction sectors in Australia, and improve their ability to detect potential modern slavery through transaction monitoring.

To supplement Suncorp's transaction monitoring, the 'See Something, Say Something' campaign was delivered to frontline teams in the Bank to highlight indicators of potential modern slavery when interacting with customers.

Taking action to address the risks – our insurance operations in Australia

Commercial insurance portfolio review

This year Suncorp developed an ESG impact assessment tool to identify exposure to potential modern slavery in our commercial insurance portfolio. This incorporates guidance and tools from the UNPSI and UNPRB programs, and considers sector and country.

Following a successful high level assessment based on policy data as at 31 December 2020, a more extensive assessment was undertaken based on policy data as at 30 June 2021.

Suncorp's exposure to potential modern slavery risk was assessed, indicating a very low risk through the agriculture, construction, cleaning, automotive repair, meat, seafood and poultry processing, fishing, shipping, labour hire and sex industries.

Suncorp will increase the sophistication of its approach in line with global sustainability frameworks, emerging industry guidance and the availability of Australian data that identifies modern slavery hotspots.

HomeRepair case study

Suncorp Group’s wholly owned subsidiary, HomeRepair, provides home repair services across Australia. Typical claims fulfilled by HomeRepair are valued under $20,000, have a simple scope of work, and do not involve structural repairs. HomeRepair has a network of assessors, tradespeople, and suppliers, many of which have been previously engaged in discussions about modern slavery during onboarding, trade roadshows and dedicated presentations delivered by HomeRepair. Modern slavery clauses have been included in all new and renewing supplier contracts.

One of the most common repairs that HomeRepair carries out is to garage ceilings and doors. In 2020-21, a review of this type of repair was undertaken to identify potential modern slavery risk. The review considered our operations and the first tier of our supply chain including tradespeople, labourers, tools, materials and parts. We aim to deepen our understanding of our supply chain in future years.

HomeRepair continues to participate in Suncorp’s Modern Slavery Working Group.

“Next financial year HomeRepair will broaden our assessment of modern slavery in our operations and supply chain. Furthermore, we will host a trade roadshow where my team will continue having important discussions about modern slavery with our network.”

Geoff Keogh, CEO HomeRepair

Taking action to address the risks – our Australian business supply chain

In 2020-21, Suncorp deepened our understanding of our supply chain by increasing the number of suppliers participating in our modern slavery attestation process and engaging in conversations about modern slavery. Encouragingly, our suppliers demonstrated a greater awareness of potential modern slavery risks through this due diligence.

We also improved visibility of the suppliers used by our business partners and material service provider (our tier two suppliers), where available. These suppliers will be included in a refreshed desktop review of Suncorp's key suppliers, due to be completed by 2023.

This year Suncorp developed a minimum ESG weighting, including an assessment of modern slavery risks, which will be implemented in the selection of future suppliers with a total contract value of more than $500,000.

✓ Corporate wardrobe case study

Suncorp has a corporate wardrobe worn by our customer facing teams in Australia that include tops, bottoms, jackets, ties and belts.

Our corporate wardrobe is manufactured in Australia, China, Indonesia and Sri Lanka.

The GSI rates Indonesia and China as high risk geographies (74 and 111 out of 173 respectively). China, and in particular the Xinjiang province, is considered high risk due to allegations of forced labour and widely reported labour issues including limited freedom of association, excessive overtime and corruption. Furthermore, the manufacturing industry, including the manufacturing of garments, is associated with exploitative industry practices. This year, Suncorp commenced discussions with our corporate wardrobe supplier about these geographical and industry risks.

Our supplier confirmed, to the best of their knowledge, they had no factories in the Xinjiang province, nor had they identified cases of modern slavery. Reports for the 2020-21 period from our supplier uncovered poor labour standards, and outlined an action plan to resolve this and provide regular updates. Our supplier now provides Suncorp with quarterly reports including an assessment of health and safety and labour standards across the factories they work with.

This year, Suncorp's corporate wardrobe supplier maintained Better Cotton Initiative and Ethical Clothing Australia accreditations which indicate sustainable practices in the production of cotton and manufacturing of garments. Suncorp will continue to engage this supplier in discussions about modern slavery to ensure factory audits continue, where possible, and relevant accreditations are maintained.

In 2021, Suncorp was recognised once again on the CIPS (Chartered Institute of Procurement and Supply) Global Corporate Ethical Register for our commitment to safeguarding against unethical conduct in procurement.

Remediation – receiving and responding to concerns

Giving people a voice

Suncorp recognises that a strong risk culture is essential and our modern slavery awareness raising and training encourages people to raise concerns, directing them to talk to their leader and risk advisor and follow our incident management process. In addition, our Whistleblower Policy and confidential Whistleblower Service is available to all our people and suppliers in Australia, New Zealand and employees of our business partners overseas. By creating a safe space for our people and stakeholders to voice their concerns about modern slavery, we are more likely to be made aware of potential risks and incidents, which enables us to respond quickly and effectively.

This year our teams continued to improve their awareness, knowledge and understanding, and we continued to see questions asked about modern slavery risks and potential indicators. Teams across the organisation continue to seek clarification on clause inclusion, attestation quality and action plans. We proactively engaged with suppliers to jointly address any concerns.

We want to ensure everyone at Suncorp has a voice, capturing feedback to ensure we have an organisation where we do the right thing for our customers and stakeholders every day. In 2020-21, Suncorp introduced a frequent employee feedback platform called The Loop, which allows employees to provide feedback on a wide range of factors impacting their experience and engagement and raise concerns.

To protect our employees and employees of our business partners, we have mechanisms that work to prevent, monitor, identify and escalate poor people practices including our Enterprise Agreements and Remuneration Policy and dedicated People, Culture and Advocacy team.

Managing complaints and concerns

Feedback, complaints and concerns are a critical component of driving improved outcomes and experiences for our customers and our people. Suncorp has a robust system to receive, review and action complaints or concerns regarding our service, our people and our treatment of customers and employees. Mechanisms include regular performance meetings and interactions with customers, business partners and key suppliers. We work collaboratively to understand and resolve complaints and provide visibility and accountability of complaint volumes and themes to ensure our senior leaders understand the issues being raised and how we are responding. This extends to any concerns of modern slavery related to our customers or our people.

Assessing the effectiveness of our actions

Suncorp continues to identify and address the risk of modern slavery as we build maturity in this area. We recognise there is more to do to assess the effectiveness of our actions in managing modern slavery risk and will continue to evolve our approach. In this reporting period the actions that have helped us progress include:

- ✓ Conducted a review of our governance structures, to ensure greater visibility of and accountability for ESG issues including modern slavery through our entire organisation.
- ✓ Reviewed and updated modern slavery compliance obligations in our risk system.
- ✓ Included supply chain risk requirements in our Procurement Framework.
- ✓ Included modern slavery in the 2020-21 compliance review of Suncorp's Responsible Banking and Insurance Policy and Responsible Investment Policy.
- ✓ Continued to participate in the ABA's Modern Slavery Working Group, UN Global Compact Modern Slavery Community of Practice, and Sustainability engagement program to understand where we have strengths and our opportunities for improvement.
- ✓ Continued to seek assistance and guidance from external experts to assess our approach and activities.
- ✓ Conducted a review of the Bank's transaction monitoring process to strengthen detection of potential modern slavery in line with industry best practice.
- ✓ Following amendments to our Responsible Investment Policy in 2020, introduced a process to evaluate the extent to which our investment managers incorporate ESG issues, including modern slavery, in their own operations and management. Outcomes are captured and assessed during the initial due diligence and appointment of the investment manager and monitored on an ongoing basis through manager assessment dashboards.

Future commitments

We will continue to build our maturity and sophistication in managing the risks of modern slavery in our operations and supply chain in future years. We have built upon our three-year roadmap to help guide our organisation.

This statement is made pursuant to section 13(1) of Modern Slavery Act 2018. It constitutes the joint statement of Suncorp Group Limited as outlined on page 2 for the year ended 30 June 2021. This statement has been approved by the Board of Directors of Suncorp Group Limited.
